

U.S. ARMY CORPS OF ENGINEERS
FAMILY READINESS INFORMATION FORM

For use of this form see ER 600-1-54; the proponent agency is CEHR.

USACE supports the U.S. Army across the spectrum of conflict: from overseas expeditionary missions to homeland defense to domestic humanitarian and disaster relief operations. USACE's many employees contribute significantly every day to this Nation's defense. USACE recognizes that the sacrifices employees make are shared by their Families. USACE demonstrates a commitment to make deployments easier for Families, and time spent away from home a little easier by providing useful and relevant information and resources.

Family Readiness includes Soldiers, Civilians, spouses and other Family members proactively preparing for and coping with deployments and prolonged separations. Ways to prepare may include attending briefings or classes and reviewing written material on subjects like how to manage a household budget during a deployment; how to assist children of various ages with the deployment process; and how to communicate effectively during a separation. The Family Readiness program has an extensive collection of materials, resources, community services, and information to offer to deployed personnel and their Family members. Family Readiness can also help link spouses and Families with other Families and spouses who have a loved one deployed. Family members are invited to attend meetings, activity groups, holiday events, and more, all with the goal of helping them cope with the hardships of deployment.

Whether you had months to prepare for this deployment or whether you are being activated with little to no warning, USACE wants to assure that you and your Family are taken care of. By completing this form and allowing the USACE Family Readiness program to contact your Family during your deployment, you are assuring that you and your Family can effectively manage deployment, strengthen Family relationships, and help reduce deployment stress.

Please complete the Family Readiness Information Form ENG 6037-E. It is not mandatory to have your Family contacted during deployment or receive services but you must complete Section I Communication and Section II Employee Information. You will be able to make changes or update your form as your situation changes. You can specify the level of contact the Family Readiness Program has with your Family. You can change the level of support at anytime. Thank you for your service to USACE.
